As a senior experienced litigator, Ian's focus is to understand the real interests of clients and to find solutions that best address those interests. His approach is to litigate if necessary, but not to litigate unnecessarily. He is results oriented.

Through his years of experience, he appreciates that there are many ways to solve complex legal and factual problems; the challenge is to do so effectively without complicating the process. Lawyers are either complicators or simplifiers. Ian is a simplifier. He critically assesses and evaluates what are often tangled facts and complex legal problems in order to fashion solutions and results that best suit clients' interests.

Representative Work

Ian has a civil litigation practice that focuses on employment, partnership and commercial disputes, and related matters. He also practices in the areas of administrative law, employment law and professional governance and discipline.

Ian frequently represents senior executives in employment disputes, and he has a busy commercial litigation practice that includes corporate governance issues and partnerships disputes.

Ian regularly appears as counsel before the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, Divisional Court and the Court of Appeal, and he appears before the Supreme Court of Canada.

In the area of administrative law, Ian is an expert in matters relating to health professionals, police governance and labour relations. He acts for private and public sector trade unions in both provincial and federal jurisdictions. He is counsel to the Discipline Committee of the College of Psychologists and acts as a prosecutor for the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario. Ian represents hospital boards as independent counsel in hospital privilege hearings. He is
