Jessica practices administrative law and civil litigation. She devotes a significant amount of her practice to labour and employment law, acting as trade union counsel. She also regularly practices professional discipline law, typically acting as prosecutor for regulatory bodies in the health sector.

Jessica uses her strong interpersonal skills to understand the problems her clients face and provides effective and pragmatic solutions. She is relied upon by her clients and colleagues for her skills in conducting investigations, written advocacy, case preparation, and providing strategic advice to clients.

Jessica joined Paliare Roland LLP as an associate in 2011, after working as a summer student and completing articles with the firm. Prior to attending law school, Jessica worked for several years in a managerial role in the insurance industry.
